

A Tribute to My Father, Marc Mislange

Franck MISLANGHE
Paris, France
Nov, 2014

My father was a passionate man. No matter what topics he approached and explored during his life; the France motorcycle trial, shooting and weapons, billiards, electronics, Hewlett-Packard, wine, gastronomy, he always made them with the love of perfection and as a personal achievement goal.

So, my brother Walter and myself decided that it was crucial to preserve his memory and the important work that our father has done on his HPMemory.org website, to entrust the future of the site and its daily management and enrichment, to his friends John Minck and Kenneth Kuhn in whom we have full confidence.

Marc would have been happy to be at their side in Palo Alto, California, to perform and complete this task with enthusiasm. His greatest dream was to create a Hewlett-Packard museum of instrumentation and measurement hosted in the newly created Keysight Company, but that will depend on other factors.

Meantime, the best tribute that can be paid now to his memory is to continue to keep alive and enhance his website and preserve his unique work.